Learning the Hard Way

My mom has lots of rules. One of her rules is to put your toys away. Another rule is no running in the house. I don't always follow her rules, but I learned the hard way that I should. Last month my sister and I were chasing each other through the kitchen and living room when I slipped on a Lego and wham! I fell and broke my leg. It hurt so much I cried. Mom took me to the hospital where the doctor took an X-ray and gave me a cast. I got to choose any color, so I chose glow-in-the-dark. My cast is awesome, but it itches all the time. I had to learn how to walk with crutches. Sometimes I use them to bug my sister. She hates when I poke her with my crutch, so I keep doing it. Mom says I shouldn't pester my sister. Maybe I had better listen to my mom this time—I'd hate to end up with another broken leg!

What lesson did the boy learn?

- that bugging his sister is fun
- that there are rules for a reason
- that the doctor doesn't like toys

Carter's Tomb

Nothing has focused the world's attention on Egypt more than when Howard Carter discovered King Tut's tomb. When he was only 17 years old, Howard traveled to Egypt from his home in London. His job was to draw copies of tomb decorations. While there, Howard developed a love of Egypt and her history. He set aside art to become an archeologist, someone who studies the past by finding ancient objects. By the early 1900s, most people thought that all the ancient tombs had been discovered, but Howard Carter disagreed. He was certain that one tomb still remained—the tomb of pharaoh, or king, Tutankhamun. Howard dug in the sand for years with no success, but on November 4, 1922 all that changed. Howard Carter's team found the steps leading into the ground. He made a small hole in the corner of the doorway and looked in with a light. When asked if he could see anything, Carter replied, "Yes. Wonderful things!" This was King Tut's tomb, the most well preserved Egyptian tomb ever found. Howard later worked for collectors and museums, but no discovery could ever match the treasure trove of wealth he found in Egypt on that November day.
