 PARENT TIPS
Good readers know how to self-correct. This means that when a reader misreads a word, he or she recognizes that an error has been made and has the skills to fix the problem. If you notice your student making a reading mistake, don't jump in right away. Wait until the end of the line (or page) and ask, "Did that make sense?" If the child realizes that it doesn't make sense, support him or her in returning to the text to find the problem and work to fix it.
